DATA FOR PROGRESS

From July 28 to August 4, 2026, Data for Progress conducted a survey of 605 likely voters in Alaska using SMS and web panel respondents. The sample was weighted to be representative of likely voters by age, gender, education, race, geography, and recalled vote. The survey was conducted in English. The margin of error associated with the sample size is ±4 percentage points. Results for subgroups of the sample are subject to increased margins of error. Partisanship reflected in tabulations is based on self-identified party affiliation, not partisan registration. For more information please visit dataforprogress.org/our-methodology.

NB: subgroups with a n-size less than 40 (<40) are not shown on these cross-tabs. We choose not to display N<40 subgroups because the sample is too small to have statistical significance. We did, however, take samples of these subgroups for representational and weighting purposes to accurately reflect the electorate makeup. Some values may not add up to 100 due to rounding.

N=605 unless otherwise specified.

Some lawmakers want the same bill to also require all oil and gas companies to pay the state corporate income tax that currently only some companies pay.

Others want the bill to include only the Alaska LNG property tax break, and to leave the corporate income tax provision out.

Which comes closer to your view, even if neither is exactly right?

[40] Alaska has not offered a guaranteed pension for new public employees since 2006, replacing it with a 401(k)-like program.

Some lawmakers have proposed creating a new retirement program for state employees.

Supporters say Alaska is the only state that does not offer new public employees a pension, which has worsened shortages of police and teachers. They say the new plan would adjust contributions to stay fully funded, so there is minimal risk.

Opponents point out that past pension costs were underestimated, creating billions in unfunded liabilities. They argue the state cannot afford a new program without risking Permanent Fund dividends and the state budget.

[41] Some lawmakers have proposed a package of changes to how Alaska runs its elections.

Among other things, this proposal would:

- Allow voters to track their absentee ballots and fix small mistakes so their ballot is counted
- Provide postage-paid envelopes for absentee ballots
- Allow Tribal IDs to be used for voter identification
- Speed up ballot counting and reporting of finalized results
- Remove people from Alaska's active voter list more quickly when they appear to have moved out of the state
